

Microsoft Peripherals Get Win 10 Update

Written by Marco Attard
06 August 2015

Following the Windows 10 launch Microsoft announces updates on its PC accessory lineup, with devices such as keyboards and mice taking advantage of the latest features and functionality of the OS.

The first device is the Wireless Desktop 900, a wireless keyboard and mouse combo described as having a "simple, modern design and features quiet-touch keys for comfortable and responsive typing." The main Win 10-related features are one-touch access to Cortana, OneNote and virtual desktop, and AES encryption for "safe and secure wireless connectivity."

Meanwhile the Wireless Mobile Mouse 3500 is an update on the previous Wireless Mobile Mouse 3500 featuring Bluetooth 4.0 SMART technology and a 4-way scroll wheel.

Other Microsoft keyboards are also getting Win 10 updates-- the Wireless Desktop 850 (formerly the 800), Wireless Desktop 3050 (formerly the 3000) and Wireless Comfort Desktop 5050 (formerly the 5000) get AES encryption and easy access to Cortana, OneNote and virtual desktops.

All the above mentioned Microsoft products should hit the market from October 2015.

Go New and Updated PC Accessories for Windows 10