

Logitech Claims Best Webcam Yet

Written by Marco Attard
09 February 2017

Logitech states the Brio is its best webcam yet-- one featuring 4K recording complete with HDR support and RightLight 3 technology to improve images in low-light conditions.

Described as the "Tesla of webcams," the Brio has a glass and metal body, and is one the first webcams to take advantage of YouTube's recently announced 4K streaming support. The combination of HDR and RightLight 3 promises better images and video, with RightLight extending the range in lighting conditions and HDR balancing the lighting.

As well as 4K streaming the camera is capable of delivering 5x zoom at 1080p, plus a range of frame rates including 1080p at 60fps. An IR-based facial recognition feature allows one to use the Windows 10 Hello feature to log into a PC using just their face, negating the need for a password.

The Logitech Brio is available now.

Go Introducing Logitech's Most Advanced Webcam yet: Logitech Brio