Lenovo's Yoga tablet family gets a Mobile World Congress 2014 update with the Yoga Tablet 10 HD+, a faster version of the original 10-inch version bearing the same flexible design.

The tablet features a 1920x1200 display with improvements on viewing angles and pixel density, as well as a more powerful Qualcomm Snapdragon 400 CPU, larger (if unspecified) storage and an 8MP rear-facing camera.

Like previous versions, the HD+ tablet hides an cylindrical 9000mAh battery inside the signature kickstand. The battery powers up to 18 hours of use, while the kickstand stands the tablet upright at 30- and 80-degree angles.

Construction is in aluminium and chrome, and Lenovo adds a DOit app bundle-- SHAREit (allows P2P file sharing via ad-hoc network), SECUREit (anti-malware and privacy app), SYNCit (SMS, phone log and contact backup) and SNAPit (camera app).

The Yoga Tablet 10 HD+ hits retailers from April 2014.
