

The first Apple Store in Belgium gets an official opening date-- 19 September 2015, together with a listing on the company website.

Located in Avenue de la Toison d'Or, Brussels, the retail outlet features a hoarding saying "Creativity, to be Continued," paired with examples of comic book art.

"Traditionally comic strips are drawn using ink and paper," the company says. "The advancement of modern technology allows comic artists to explore their ideas more easily and freely. The role of Apple in the future of creativity is to inspire the best tools to encourage new talent to grow."
