

Note Taking Gets Wifi-Powered

Written by Marco Attard
31 October 2012

Handwritten notes get a lick of wifi-powered paint with the Livescribe Sky Wifi Smartpen-- an audio-recording pen saving handwritten notes and linked audio files directly to Evernote accounts.

Like earlier Livescribe smartpens the Sky demands users to write on proprietary physical notebooks (the paper has microdot patterns the smartpen tracks notes and audio with). However the Sky drops USB connection with PCs in favour of a wifi radio and automatic content beaming content Evernote accounts.

The chunky-looking pen also has an OLED display guiding users through the setup process, and either 2, 4 or 8GB of onboard storage.

The company promises it will provide compatibility with Google Drive, Dropbox and Facebook accounts from 2013, while the Sky Smartpen is available now.

Go Livescribe Sky Wifi Smartpen